A VISION OF VICTORY.—[illegible] Meagher concluded his speech in Boston the other night as follows:

The picture unfolds itself to me. The returning army, with that banner—the woodsmen from Maine, the riflemen from the Upper Mississippi, the farmer and the mechanic from New England, all of them in their tattered uniforms, and with their riddled flags, and amidst that crowd the green flag of Irish, the laughing voices, the kindling eyes, the hearty nature of those whose vitality is never greater, whose intellect is never more vivid than when danger threatens. [Applause.] Oh may this picture, roughly and imperfectly sketched, be realized, and in the presence, and high above the remnants of this victorious army, bearing with them the ark of the American covenant, may the national capitol expand its grand and graceful proportions, its dome perfected, the greatest image of liberty standing more erect and stately, and august and adored than ever, and high above it, announcing victory over the wide world, and an auspicious omen that there shall be victories henceforth of no less consequence to the United States, the symbolic eagle of the Republic, soaring upward and upward to the sun. [Prolonged the enthusiastic cheering.]

Nothing but the Old Flag—the [illegible]
With the stars of the Union [illegible]
Arise and defend it [illegible]
Whose blood [illegible] the banner [illegible]

TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 28, 1862

The War for the Union.

It is the part of Secessionists every where in the present conflict to place our government in the wrong. That is their persistent effort. They even deny that the rebels inaugurated the war, and in attempting to throw its responsibility upon the government, they denounce the manner of its prosecution, and seek in every way to throw obstacles in the way of its success. Manifestly, if in their power, they would send information to the enemy of the movements of our armies, and if in a position where they could do it with safety, would shoulder their arms and join the rebels.

There is no room to deny the fact that this war was forced upon our government. It was in its direct recognition that on the 12th of April last—the eve of the fall of Fort Sumter—the military Secretary of the Confederate States, speaking of "THE WAR THIS DAY BEGUN," said that it was likely to involve the conquest of the Federal Capitol, and the capture of Boston itself. From that fatal day nothing was left to the National Government except the choice of holding its existence at the mercy of men who, in pursuit of their avowed purposes of revolution, the establishment of a Southern Slave Government, had shown no pity, no remorse for their previous acts—or to defend the national existence, as best it might, by the force with which it was clothed under the constitution and laws.

We know what has been done. The government at the time of trial, was completely disarmed. Treachery and treason were in all its public offices. Washington was filled with traitors who remained there to further the designs of the rebels. The same class of traitors were scattered about in all the free States, not excepting even our own Oregon. Every step that was taken by Government to sustain itself, was met by the traitors in all the free States with violent opposition. There were traitors seeking the destruction of our troops in Baltimore; there Government declared martial law and suspended the writ of habeas corpus, and a howl went up from all secession papers and all secessionists in all the free States, that the Constitution was violated, and that the President should be hurled from his position. Traitors were arrested and sent to prison, and treasonable papers suspended—and the secession traitors raised the shout for "free speech and free press!!!" Government has done nothing to save itself and the nation, that has not met the determined hostility of a party who, as far as they dare, have aided and comforted the enemy. They seek every opportunity to throw obstacles in the way of the success of Government, and knowing that it cannot be sustained without money—that "money is the sinew of war"—they are even counseling the treasonable act of refusing to pay the national taxes!

The Government will never surrender to the rebels while there is the remotest hope of resisting them, and the time may come when it will be necessary to treat rebels in the free States according to their just deserts. We had tories in the Revolution as we have now. History shows what disposition was made of them. Then [illegible] were connected by ties of consanguinity, or of private interests, with men warring against our Government, whose ultimate welfare could only be secured by its downfall.

What another President, at another and much less appalling crisis in our history, conceived to be his duty, and that too while as yet the stability of his chair was in no way menaced, is known to all. Charged by the Constitution to see that the laws were faithfully executed, he prescribed to himself the obligation of preserving the Union to this end "at any price." The fact of this solemn conviction on the part of President Jackson, in "the era of nullification," was recently recalled to the popular memory by the Hon. George Bancroft, the historian of the United States, on the occasion of a recent meeting held in New York for the purpose of contributing to the relief of destitute loyalists in North Carolina. On that occasion Mr. B. spoke as follows:

[illegible] half [illegible] In the [illegible] State of New York [illegible] We have given the President all that he has asked [illegible] and [illegible] in [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] faulty [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] President [illegible] his [illegible] A [illegible] South Carolina [illegible] Jackson [illegible] the [illegible] that [illegible] the last [illegible] to Livingston his [illegible] friend and best adviser. He sent with these words: "I have had the letter in my own hands, handed to me by the only surviving child of Mr. Livingston. I know the letter which I now read is a true copy:

"DEAR SIR: I submit the above as the conclusion of the proclamation for your amendment and revision. Let it receive your best flight of eloquence to strike to the heart and speak to the feelings of my deluded countrymen of South Carolina. The Union must be preserved without [illegible] if this be possible. But it must be preserved at all hazards and at any price. Yours, with high regard,

ANDREW JACKSON.

December 4, 1832—11 o'clock P. M.
EDWARD LIVINGSTON."

Men who profess to revere the memory of ANDREW JACKSON would do well to ponder upon this letter.

The Light of History

Since the consummation of the Southern revolt many interesting revelations have been made of its character, which show that it has been the growth of years, and it is instructive to turn to the discussions and speculations of thirty years ago on this subject, and mark how some of them have been strikingly fulfilled. The assertion that the revolution sprung from any new events—that it had not been long determined on—that its great design is not to establish a Southern government based upon slavery—creating an aristocracy which shall control that government, predicated on the ownership of slaves—making the "poor whites" an inferior race—is the veriest nonsense. All the acts of the recognized leaders of the party show these assumptions to be truths.

Referring to the past—in a yellow pamphlet, styled—"A Gratuitous Exhibition of the Great Southern War Horse, yclept Nullification alias Separation, alias Dissolution of the Union," being a supplement of the Philadelphia Gazette in 1833, evidently the contribution of Matthew Carey, we find an extract from a speech of Mr. Wallace delivered in the Virginia House of Delegates. Mr. Wallace seems to have had a prophetic vision of the woes that would fall on Virginia in case of a war with South Carolina and that Virginia took sides with the latter. He says, "We shall either have to resist a Northern army on our own soil or in South Carolina. While our militia, called en masse to the field, will be defending their territory, who will be defending your wives and children, to shield [illegible] by the slaves? who your property from pillage by the Northern troops?" After considering the improbability, in a dissolution of the Union, that Kentucky and Tennessee would be mad enough to leave their brethren of the Northwest, and that Virginia can not safely go with the cotton states, he closes with this remarkable prediction:

"Sir, an army of ten thousand men, proclaiming liberty to the slaves, supplying them with arms, and forming a rallying point for them in the event of defeat, would overturn this fragile Union and erect upon its ruins the forms of despotism or reduce to colonial dependence. Virginia, although [illegible] for disunion, would be [illegible] much stronger [illegible] with them. But the moment a [illegible] of southern states is proposed, the [illegible] enterprising sons of western Virginia would [illegible] they ought, by every consideration, [illegible] with their tranquility and [illegible] themselves from the [illegible] large portions of the country [illegible] mountains in the north of the state [illegible] formed a part, as in the Union, it would be with Pennsylvania. A southern [illegible] could not suit them. [illegible] these but [illegible] conjectures of distempered fancy [illegible] but premises of reason. [illegible] committee and the people of Virginia [illegible]

In those nullification times, as now in this secession madness, the disunionists counted upon foreign aid. Whether the present disaffection was stimulated by foreign promises we cannot say. The attitude of England towards this country to-day, at any rate, is such as to make the following bit of history very curious if not instructive. It is an extract from a letter from Thomas Hulme, a naturalized Englishman, to Old Hayne of South Carolina, relating the substance of a conversation held with a great political character in London in September 1824:

"[illegible] enjoy peace, and our government [illegible] the industry of the country [illegible] observed Mr. Hulme [illegible] it will, it is my decided opinion that the United States will soon be the most powerful and independent nation [illegible] My friend doubted all I said [illegible] But [illegible] we were [illegible] with our [illegible] at home, we would [illegible] the rising greatness [illegible] of the United States. [illegible] How [illegible] said I. Why, said he, we would [illegible] the Southern States [illegible] we would [illegible] the [illegible] growing states that [illegible] we would offer them [illegible] protection, and such commercial [illegible] treaties [illegible] we would produce a separation of the Union. But," said I, "[illegible] you would be disappointed [illegible] the eastern states joining you [illegible] during the last war, but you were disappointed [illegible] and probably you would be disappointed again. "No," said he, "we now know better how to manage these matters; we would, with our fleet, protect them, and our merchants would take their produce, and carry to them manufactured articles, duty free, for their own use, and for the purpose of smuggling into the other states, and thus, by these and other means (which I understood to be a liberal application of secret service money) we would soon put a stop to the increasing wealth, power, and independence of your [illegible]."

A Few Words from a "Volunteer."

Editor of the Oregonian:

How many young men are there now in Oregon who are willing to devote three years to the service of their country? I speak of young men particularly, for it is [illegible] them, including all single men, [illegible] for service in the army, devolves, the duty of holding the present call of our country for volunteers,—inasmuch as married men have more to bind them to their homes, while they can render a service no less important to the country by raising food for the men who are sent to meet our enemies on the battle field, and by attending to the various departments of industry which are necessary to the prosperity of a nation.

I remember that a few months ago, we had a great many fine "Union Meetings" throughout the State—and grand affairs they were too. The loyal citizens of our fair young State seemed to be aroused to a proper appreciation of the real value of our institutions of our Government. They arose, young and old, en masse, as it were, to assert their love for the Constitution and the bright, glorious flag of our country. They seemed to look upon the unhallowed attempt to disrupt the American Union with scorn and indignation, and appeared willing and indeed anxious to assist the Government in punishing the heartless foes of humanity who had raised their hands, without provocation, to plunge, as it were, a dagger into the bosom of their alma mater.

At that time everything augured a speedy success. We hoped, and not without good grounds, that the struggle would be a short one, and that it would be crowned with complete success on the part of our arms in quelling the rebellion, and many regretted that we of the Pacific could not participate in the conflict so that we might share with our brethren of the older States, the honors of the apparently coming victory, and show to the world, by acts rather than by word, our love and veneration for the blessed heritage bequeathed us by our fathers.

Our hopes have been blighted, there was a greater amount of treason and infamy lurking in the bosoms of our former brethren than we had ever dreamed could exist; the enemy has proven stronger than we had anticipated, and instead of rejoicing over a vanquished foe, our Government is still struggling against the rebellion almost as formidable as ever, and with the gloomy prospect of a war with England—or first [illegible] it seems that all the friendship England has ever borne us was no deeper than her own interests were concerned, and that she secretly [illegible] longing desire, checked only by [illegible] and by want of a favorable opportunity to revenge herself of the injury which she received at the hands of our illustrious forefathers.

By act of Congress the President has been authorized to raise an army of [illegible] men. Oregon's quota of the army would be [illegible] men. She is called upon for only ten companies—nothing near [illegible] the usual [illegible] And these are [illegible] entirely in lieu [illegible] It has now been nearly three months since the [illegible] and there are only about 400 or [illegible] 500 [illegible] [illegible] enough [illegible] volunteer their services. [illegible] truth? Why should [illegible] What [illegible] Can it be that we have no men [illegible] While [illegible] all these [illegible] guards [illegible] grand display [illegible] where with the stars and [illegible] huzzas for the Union. Has their love [illegible] country [illegible] weakened? Or have they suddenly [illegible] to the conclusion that the Government can take care of itself and that they had better look after their own interests?

I have talked with a great many young men of my acquaintance about enlisting—Some say "there are plenty of men who can go, having no particular aim in view, and who would be glad to get a position in the army, let them go—I must finish my education—[illegible] Such [illegible] these so-called 'Fellows' are generally the first [illegible] defense of [illegible] country and [illegible] the first to rush off to [illegible] They also lose [illegible] the fact they are [illegible] that [illegible] to [illegible] owe all [illegible] that [illegible] the only [illegible] Otherwise [illegible] needed [illegible] kept idle [illegible] they [illegible] thought [illegible] States [illegible] to the [illegible] could [illegible] And so it [illegible] seeking [illegible] care [illegible] an ex [illegible] off the [illegible] just expressions [illegible] at his selfish conduct.

However there are some young men in Oregon among whom they are proud to be numbered, who are not lost to all sense of duty, but who [illegible] enough, patriotic enough [illegible] enough (if you [illegible] Messrs. [illegible] goods) to offer their services to their country for three years or during the war for the Union without any provision whatever. Not [illegible] those who have thus volunteered [illegible] of the country [illegible] or the penitentiary. [illegible] endowed with at least [illegible] ordinary ability [illegible] sense." [illegible] idle spectators [illegible] surprised [illegible] to withstand the trials and temptations [illegible] soldier's life and come [illegible] principles [illegible] us still. [illegible] not be [illegible] as good care [illegible] enlisted in [illegible] opportunity [illegible] fight we [illegible] like true soldiers. Should we fall [illegible] mourn our loss, [illegible] remember and take consolation from the [illegible] songs—

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.

May God bless our beloved country and restore once more to her distracted citizens, the blessings of peace—well peace—but let it be an honorable peace.

CITY.

TWO MEN DROWNED.—We learn from Mr [illegible] of Sauvie's Island that Patrick Morgan and Martin [illegible] were drowned in the Williams Slough, on Thursday, Jan 23d. As near as we can learn the following are the particulars: Mr Reasoner had been talking of going to catch saw logs which had been carried away from the mills in this city, and it is supposed he was doing so, when he was caught in the heavy wind storm of that day and blown against the float ice, which had gorged at Moran's farm. The boat was found half under the ice; his coat on the ice near it. His cries for help probably attracted the attention of Moran, and it seems he crossed the Slough above the ice, in a skiff, to his assistance, and his tracks were followed in the snow on the shore ice, nearly to where Reasoner was; when he appears to have stepped on some rotten ice and fell through, the swift current carrying him under immediately—as his hat remains undisturbed on the ice. Reasoner very likely attempted to get ashore with the aid of his oars, but no doubt chilled by breaking through frequently let go and sank. Both oars were found on the ice where he went down, not far from the boat.

FIRE.—About half past twelve Sunday night No. 2's bell sounded the alarm of fire. It was soon discovered to proceed from an old untenanted building in the vicinity of the Turner Hall. Nos. 2 and 3 were soon on the ground and extinguished the flames. It was fired perhaps to see what the "b'hoys" could do on a freezing night—they were up to time, however. As the building had been set on fire once before, Chief Webber gave orders to the Hook & Ladder company to pull it down, but the Hooks "warn't thar."

THE STEAMERS AND THE RIVER.—Mr Bosser informs us that the Columbia, at Willow Bar, is entirely clear of ice, and thinks that it is clear to the mouth. Dr Bryant, of St Helens, reported the steamers Multnomah and Cowlitz had been frozen up in the Columbia, below that place, but whether they were in a place that would protect them when the ice broke up, we have been unable to learn. If not injured, they should have been here before this.

THE BOAT RACE YESTERDAY.—The boat race yesterday between Lyman Seaman and Cornelius Frenchy, was witnessed by several hundred persons. It was a very exciting race, and would have been pretty well matched, had not an accident occurred. At about the foot of the island, Seaman struck a snag with one of his oars, and broke it in two, and was compelled to come down with one oar. His competitor, coming in a considerable distance ahead, was declared the winner. Another race will probably be the result.

FOR VANCOUVER.—The steamer Vancouver will leave this morning at half past nine o'clock for the Washington Territory side of the Columbia river, opposite the mouth of the Willamette. An excellent opportunity for those who wish to communicate with Vancouver.

CITY TREASURER'S REPORT.—By reference to the report of the City Treasurer in another column it will be seen that the receipts and expenditures of the city keep pretty well balanced. There were but fifty five dollars in the hands of the Treasurer, at the time he made his last report.

The National American, a Maryland paper, gives the following as its platform:

"There are but two parties—one goes for crushing out rebellion by the Government, and the other for crushing out the Government by rebellion. We belong to the former."

The Cincinnati Gazette says that Breckinridge—the reputed head of the secession party in Oregon—was raising rebel troops at Prestonsburgh and Hazel Green, Ky.

A Philadelphia paper says that the prices of common wool are rising in that market. They are at least three-fifths higher than at this time last year.

The camels in Washoe are used to pack salt from Walker's Lake to Virginia City. They carry six hundred pounds each.

In one week, in the city of New York 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and 60,000 barrels of flour were shipped to Europe.

The towns and cities of California have nobly contributed to relieve the distressed cases caused by the floods at Sacramento.

Efforts at the cultivation of cotton and rice will be made the present season, in the Sandwich Islands.

THE NEW TELEGRAPH LINE, CONNECTING OREGON WITH THE EASTERN STATES, AND THE WORLD GENERALLY—IN ANTICIPATION

What mean those lengths of mystic wire
Stretched out afar o'er hill and plain
As if to string some majestic lyre,
And ring out earth's redeeming strain,
What of those sentinel posts that stand
On wooded hill, and dusty plain
Pointing to heaven sublimely grand
Arm linked to arm from main to main
What mean those mystic keys and s[illegible]
That chemic found those magic springs
Where form is wed to thought and [illegible]
Rides forth on fiery-lightning wings
It is the master piece of thought
The climax of all human skill
When chemistry is proudly taught
To execute all human will
It is a tribute paid to man
Spreading his praise on fiery wings
As never was paid since time began
By Priest or Prophet Chief or King,
No more we trust the carrier dove
Or on the laggard steed depend,
But give the lightnings from above
Our thoughts around the world to send
Flashing through heaven's remotest space
To spread the news, or state of trade,
Time's swiftest flight would lose the race
When harassed with this subtle jade
E'er word is out, or deed is wrought
'Tis whispered round and round the world,
The earnest soul, with every thought,
Is omnipresent like as God!

McClellan and Beauregard Contrasted

Mr Russell, correspondent of the London Times, in his letter dated Washington, October 7th, speaks as follows of the two opposing Generals:

"When I had the pleasure of conversing with Gen McClellan for the first time he asked me several questions, with evident interest and friendly curiosity—not unusual on the part of Generals in reference to their antagonists—respecting Gen Beauregard In his case there was all the more reason for such inquiries in the fact that they were old fellow-students and class mates To my mind there is something of resemblance between the men Both are below the middle height. They are both squarely built, and famed for muscular power since their college days. Beauregard, indeed, is lean and thin ribbed; McClellan is full and round, with a Napoleonic tendency to embonpoint, subdued by incessant exercise Beauregard sleeps little, McClellan's temperament requires a full share of rest; both are spare and Spartan in diet, studious and quiet. Beauregard is rather saturnine, and, if not melancholic, is of a grim gaiety, McClellan is genial even in his reserve. The density of the hair, the squareness of the jaw, the firmness and regularity of the teeth, and the outlines of the features are points of similarity in both, which would be more striking if Beauregard were not of the true Louisianian Creole tint, while McClellan is fair-complexioned—Beauregard has a dark, dull student's eye, the dullness of which, however, arises from its formation, for it is full of fire, and its glances are quick and searching McClellan has a deep, clear eye, into which you can look far and deep, while you feel it searches far and deep into you Beauregard has something of pretension in his manner—not hauteur, but a folding-arm, meditative sort of air, which seems to say, "Don't disturb me, I'm thinking of military movements" McClellan seems to be always at leisure, but you feel at the same time you ought not to intrude too much upon him, even when you seek in vain for the grounds of that impression in anything that he is doing or saying—Beauregard is more crafty, subtle and astute; McClellan is more comprehensive, more learned, more impressionable. Beauregard is a thorough soldier, McClellan may prove he is a great General. The former only looks to military consequences, and disregards popular manifestations, the latter respects the opinions of the outer world, and sees political as well as military results in what he orders Young as McClellan is, and suddenly elevated to such a giddy height, he is perfectly modest, unassuming, and unaffected, though quite self possessed, calm self respecting and reticent They are both the creatures of accident so far as their present positions are concerned It remains to be seen if either can control the current of events, and if in either the artillery man or the cavalry officer of the United States army there is the stuff around which history is moulded, such as that of which the artilleryman of Brienne or the leader of the Ironsides was made.

Why is a candlemaker the most hopeless of men? Because his works are wicked, and his wicked work is brought to light

Certificate—The undersigned [illegible]

[illegible] recovery of his health Being borne down by the distressing symptoms incident to the vicious practices of uncontrollable passion in youth depressed in body and mind unable to perform even the most trifling duty imposed upon the ordinary avocations of life I sought the advice of many physicians, who at first regarded my disease as of trifling importance—but alas! after a few weeks, and in several instances months of their treatment I found, to my unutterable horror that instead of relief my symptoms became more alarming in their torture and being told by one that my disease being principally confined to the brain, medicine would be of little consequence I despaired of ever regaining my health strength and energy and as a last resort, and with but a faint hope called upon Dr Czapkay, who after examining my case prescribed some medicine which almost instantly relieved me of the dull pain and dizziness in my head Encouraged by the result, I resolved to place myself immediately under his care, and by a strict obedience to all his directions and advice my head became clear and my ideas collected, the constant pain in my back and groins, the weakness of my limbs the nervous reaction of my whole body on the slightest alarm or excitement the misanthropy and evil forebodings the self-distrust and want of confidence in others the incapability to study and want of resolution, the frightful exciting, and at times pleasurable dreams at night followed by involuntary discharges, have all disappeared, and in fact, in two months after having consulted the doctor, I felt as if inspired by a new life—that life which but a short time ago I contemplated to end by my own hand With the view to guard the unfortunate from falling into the snare of the impotent quacks, I deem it my duty to offer this testimony to the merit and skill of Dr. Czapkay, and recommend him to all who may stand in need of medical advice being assured by my own experience, that once under his care a radical and permanent cure will be effected

MARYSVILLE, June 3d, 1855.

DR L J CZAPKAY San Francisco—Sir I have used the last of your medicine and do not think I shall need any more as I feel very well except that I have not entirely got my strength yet but am well with the appetite I have. It is just three weeks you may recollect since I called at your institution with my constitution as I thought, broken entirely and never thought you would be able to cure me perfectly but thought you might be able to do something to ease the pain in my back and head and strengthen my nerves so that I would not get excited and tremble at everything Now that you know what I expected, you may judge of my satisfaction at my complete recovery from those symptoms and the removal of those sores and blotches from my skin and the ulcers from my throat and the entire stoppage of those emissions, which you said were principally the cause of my sickness I can hardly tell you which is the greatest, my joy or my surprise, for except not having fully got my strength I feel as well as any man can feel.

I enclose I send you twenty dollars over your charge, and think myself cheaply cured If you think anybody will be benefited you may put this letter in the newspapers. Believe me gratefully yours   THOMAS HAYDEN.

Thankfulness is the incentive to gratitude.

CERTIFICATE—Prompted by an honest desire of my heart, I wish to lay before the public a case which deserves a commendation not only as an act of scientific skill, but that of humanity also About two years ago I suddenly, and from causes unknown to me was seized with a fit of epilepsy, which owing to my inability to meet the expenses consequent upon a thorough medical treatment, and the discouragement which I met with in attempting it soon became such I was then led to believe me to defy the skill of any physician I was frequently, while in pursuit of my calling, thrown [illegible] and without the slightest warning, and although disgusted [illegible] the quacks I yet despised the, [illegible] look upon those who would [illegible] me from danger as enemies [illegible] the extent of my miseries. While [illegible] having [illegible] to my affliction; [illegible] was induced to attempt [illegible] recommendation, called upon Dr L J Czapkay [illegible] of my circumstances, and [illegible] regardless of which [illegible] my case and with [illegible] was once more restored to perfect health [illegible] reward him for the boon which I enjoy at present [illegible] I render it [illegible] the case public, in [illegible] may find a physician [illegible] be placed
